

WELCOME TO THE MEXICAN RESTAURANT

AN INCREDIBLE STORY FROM THE DESPERADO

About a year ago, a real Mexican wandered into my restaurant, a shaman, as it turned out later in the conversation. He stayed until late at night and we had a very long conversation about food, his homeland, and our worries. He praised the decoration of my restaurant and so I told him my woes, that many people apparently no longer have any respect for all the work and the money involved. Unfortunately, things are stolen and destroyed as much as possible. Not only ashtrays, tablecloths, and flower pots disappear without a trace, no, even parts of our terrace wall are missing. The snake head that you see in the wall has already been broken out and stolen several times. The Mexican stood up, shook his head and said he would take care of it and punish all thieves in the future who would lay hands on my things. He went wordlessly into every corner of the restaurant, paused for a moment, murmured something to himself that I didn't understand, and went to the next. It all looked a bit strange and to be honest, I thought: Now he's probably had one tequila too many. It all took quite a while and so, smiling a little to myself, I went back to my work. When I later returned to his table to collect payment, he said that he had placed a curse on all the items in the restaurant, which would cause anyone who stole something to lose their luck. As he said this, he had a very sly smile on his face. We said our goodbyes and he said that he would like to come again. Now, I am a modern, enlightened person and don't really believe in hocus-pocus, curses, etc. However, since in the past six months a second person has stood before me, remorseful, apologized, and returned a stolen item, I am beginning to doubt my attitude towards this hocus-pocus.

STEAKS

that people love us for

THE ANGUS BEEF

For our beef steaks, we use only high-quality meat from Angus cattle. These cattle are kept on wide open pastures and are raised exclusively for meat production. They feed exclusively on grasses and plants found on the South American pampas and live completely stress-free. This is how they achieve their first-class meat quality. To reliably guarantee you a high-quality product with consistently high quality and reasonable prices, we alternate between the countries of origin Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay.
